Invitation and conference aim

Dear professors, lecturers, researchers and specialists,

ACADEMIC SCIENCE PUBLISHING invites you to participate in the International Scientific and Practical Conference “Humanity, Society and Nature: Current Challenges and Scientific and Practical Solutions”, to be held on 3 November 2026. Research papers and extended abstracts are invited from academic staff, research personnel, doctoral candidates, independent researchers, master’s students, undergraduate students and practitioners.

Conference aim

To examine the relationships between humans, society and nature from the perspectives of different disciplines, propose scientifically grounded practical solutions to current challenges, and promote the exchange of research experience and international cooperation among researchers.

Key objectives

- Bring together research findings on natural, technological, economic and social challenges.
- Highlight interdisciplinary research and opportunities to apply scientific findings in practice.
- Disseminate solutions that advance education, health, environmental security and human well-being.
- Support research by young scientists and researchers.

Conference format: publication of electronic proceedings containing research papers and extended abstracts, without oral presentations.
